

(female - English accent)

I can't believe what you're telling me. My son? A part of this crime? You also say they're many involved. How do you have Brian picked out of a crowd of many? Don't you try and pull the wool over my eyes. I may be small and have age on you, but I can still show you. As I am sitting here, you're telling me my son is guilty of something I know he didn't do? How am I to take that? I'll tell you, a child is a reflection of his parent's right? I was raised in a small village. As a child I learned right from wrong, and, when you know you are in the right, you stand up for it, in the face of all adversity. Following a moral code is most important. I raised Brian on my own. I brought him from England after his father died. I taught him that same moral code. I cannot believe that witnesses say that Brian was a part of that group of violent people? I would like to see him right now and I will not take no for an answer.
